What is a Personal Tutor?

A Personal Tutor is

- a member of academic staff in Informatics
- who oversees your progress through the degree, and
- helps you find your way to your next stage, whether PhD or industry, and
- helps you find support in other areas of University life.

A Personal Tutor is not

- an academic tutor for your courses;
- a counsellor;
- a financial or fees adviser.
The Student Support Team

▶ Katey Lee (0131 650 3148)
▶ Karen Davidson (0131 650 3151)

inf-sst@inf.ed.ac.uk Level 6, Appleton Tower

The SST can

▶ act as main point of contact for you if you are experiencing any difficulties and for any non-academic queries
▶ give advice on regulations and processes such as special circumstances, extensions, progression and degree transfers
▶ meet with you during office hours
When will you see your Personal Tutor

▶ At the start of each semester (one-to-one)

▶ In the middle of this semester (individual or group)

▶ In a group (probably) meeting next semester

▶ AND any time you want to discuss something!
What do you do in the first meeting?

- Introduce yourselves to each other
- Discuss course choices and if needed, programme choice
- If there are any issues (e.g. physical or mental health) that might impact your ability to study, consider discussing support and later...

- discuss progress

- consider career plans

- discuss project choice/progress
MyEd Personal Tutor channel known as the ‘Euclid PT Notes system’ to staff.

- Where you and your tutor and the SST can record (usually brief) notes of meetings, discussions, etc.
- You’re encouraged to add reflective comments to these notes afterwards
How do you contact your Personal Tutor?

Two main methods:

▶ via the MyEd Personal Tutor channel - you can write a note, or ‘request a meeting’
  ▶ advantage: everything is on your record (for ever…)
▶ by email (please send email from your University account where possible)
  ▶ advantage: convenient, better for conversations, is how most faculty run their working lives!

Some tutors strongly prefer email. Some strongly prefer to use MyEd. If they don’t tell you, use whichever you prefer.

See the Student Support Team slide for their contact details
Your Personal Tutor’s responsibilities to you

▶ To arrange the mandatory meetings (as above)

▶ To respond timeously to queries and requests for other meetings – within three working days

▶ To provide effective advice and support where they can, and pointers to other advisers where they can’t

▶ To provide references
Your responsibilities to your Personal Tutor

► To read email regularly (and check MyEd – it sends notifications by email)

► To respond promptly to queries and invitations

► To keep them informed of any problems affecting your studies
When things go wrong for you

Most of you will sail happily and hard-workingly through your degree. Some of you won’t be so lucky. When things go wrong, tell the Student Support Team or your Personal Tutor a.s.a.p.

Many things can happen:

▶ You can have a significant mental or physical illness (anything more than a week is probably significant).
▶ A friend, flatmate or close relative may be seriously ill, injured, or even die.
▶ You may have a bad relationship break-up.
▶ You may suddenly have serious money problems.
▶ You may get burgled, or called for jury duty.
▶ You may find you can’t cope, and drop into a cycle of blue funk.

Don’t be shy (we’ve seen it all before, and many of us have been there ourselves). Don’t feel you have to deal with it yourself.
‘Special Circumstances’

are anything outside your control that has a significant (bad!) effect on your ability to study or do assessments.

- The University has well-oiled procedures for making allowances for these.
- This does not mean lowering standards, except marginally;
- but it can mean discounting certain badly affected marks,
- and in extreme cases allowing a repeat later.
- We can only give these allowances if ‘SCs’ are reported to us at the time. No retrospective consideration (without very good reason).
- So, when things go wrong,

Tell the Student Support Team or your Personal Tutor a.s.a.p.
If things go wrong with your Personal Tutor

Personal Tutors are human too, and some are inevitably not as good as others, or just have character clashes with some tutees. If you have any dissatisfaction with the help and advice from your Personal Tutor:

- Contact me!
- preferably by email, so we can arrange to talk in person
- Or contact the Student Support Team

You can also contact me or the Student Support Team if your Personal Tutor is away or on holiday (they should have an auto-reply in their email to tell you this).
Finally...

Our degrees involve a lot of work. To avoid running into problems:

- Make sure you keep up – don’t drop behind in doing exercises – whether or not they have any marks!
- Especially in the programming courses – you can’t learn to program without doing lots of it.

The University have a variety of support services that can give you help if you need it:

- Advice Place
- Student Disability Service
- Counselling Service
- Edinburgh Global
- . . .

Always feel free to start with the Student Support Team or your Personal Tutor

Try to find time for having fun!
