

Your Personal Tutor and You

Julian Bradfield
Senior Personal Tutor

inf-st@inf.ed.ac.uk

IF-4.07

More info: click the 'Personal Tutor' link mentioned in the intro text to the Year 1 Handbook.

<http://web.inf.ed.ac.uk/infweb/student-services/ito/admin/personal-tutoring-statement>

What is a Personal Tutor?

A Personal Tutor is

- ▶ a member of academic staff in Informatics
- ▶ who oversees your progress through the degree, and
- ▶ helps you find your way through academic life, and
- ▶ helps you find support in other areas of life.

A Personal Tutor is not

- ▶ an academic tutor for your courses;
- ▶ a counsellor;
- ▶ a financial or fees adviser.

When will you see them?

- ▶ At the start of each semester (one-to-one)
- ▶ In the middle of this semester (individual or group)
- ▶ In a group (probably) meeting next semester
- ▶ AND any time you want to discuss something!

What do you do in the first meeting?

- ▶ introduce yourselves to each other
- ▶ Discuss course choices and possible study paths and later...

- ▶ discuss progress
- ▶ discuss study skills etc.
- ▶ consider career plans

MyEd Personal Tutor channel

known as 'Euclid' to staff.

- ▶ Where you and your tutor can record (usually brief) notes of meetings, discussions, etc.
- ▶ You're encouraged to add reflective comments to these notes afterwards

How do you contact your Personal Tutor?

Two main methods:

- ▶ via the MyEd Personal Tutor channel - you can write a note, or 'request a meeting'
 - ▶ advantage: everything is on your record (for ever...)
- ▶ by email (please send email from your University account where possible)
 - ▶ advantage: convenient, better for conversations, is how most faculty run their working lives!

Some tutors strongly prefer email. Some strongly prefer to use MyEd. If they don't tell you, use whichever you prefer.

Your Personal Tutor's responsibilities to you

- ▶ To arrange the mandatory meetings (as above)
- ▶ To respond timeously to queries and requests for other meetings – within three working days
- ▶ To provide effective advice and support where they can, and pointers to other advisers where they can't
- ▶ To provide references

Your responsibilities to your Personal Tutor

- ▶ To read email regularly (and check MyEd – it sends notifications by email)
- ▶ To respond promptly to queries and invitations
- ▶ To keep them informed of any problems affecting your studies

When things go wrong for you

Most of you will sail happily and hard-workingly through your degree. Some of you won't be so lucky. When things go wrong,

Tell your Personal Tutor a.s.a.p.

Many things can happen:

- ▶ You can have a significant mental or physical illness (anything more than a week is probably significant).
- ▶ A friend, flatmate or close relative may be seriously ill, injured, or even die.
- ▶ You may have a bad relationship break-up.
- ▶ You may suddenly have serious money problems.
- ▶ You may get burgled, or called for jury duty.
- ▶ You may find you can't cope, and drop into a cycle of blue funk.

Don't be shy (we've seen it all before, and many of us have been there ourselves). Don't feel you have to deal with it yourself.

'Special Circumstances' are anything outside your control that has a significant (bad!) effect on your ability to study or do assessments.

- ▶ The University has well-oiled procedures for making allowances for these.
- ▶ This does not mean lowering standards;
- ▶ but it does mean allowing you to re-take things when you're better, even if you otherwise wouldn't be allowed to; or perhaps ignoring a badly affected coursework
- ▶ We can only give these allowances if 'SCs' are reported to us at the time. No retrospective consideration (without very good reason).
- ▶ So, when things go wrong,

Tell your Personal Tutor a.s.a.p.

If things go wrong with your Personal Tutor

Personal Tutors are human too, and some are inevitably not as good as others – and some are new to the job. If you have any dissatisfaction with the help and advice from your Personal Tutor:

- ▶ Contact me!
- ▶ preferably by email, so we can arrange to talk in person

You can also contact me if your Personal Tutor is away or on holiday (they should have an auto-reply in their email to tell you this).

Finally...

Our degrees can be a lot of fun, and also a lot of work. To avoid running into problems:

- ▶ Make sure you keep up – don't drop behind in doing exercises – whether or not they have any marks!
- ▶ Especially in the programming courses – you can't learn to program without doing lots of it.

On the other hand, some of you, who are both very clever and may have previous experience, will find first year a bit dull. Hang on in there:

- ▶ Choose challenging outside courses
- ▶ If you're sure you can deal with it, you can even take extra courses (up to 40 credits with your PT's permission)
- ▶ Get involved in societies etc.
- ▶ Second year will be noticeably more interesting; third year will keep pretty much everybody fully occupied.